

FOOD JUSTICE SPEAKER

N. Diane Moss

Managing Director of Project New Village

June 4, 2019

12:30pm

Dolores Huerta Room

Hear from a local food activist!

N. Diane Moss is a social justice advocate and community organizer, currently Managing Director of Project New Village, a grassroots nonprofit organization which is transforming the political and economic environment using neighborhood-based agricultural cooperatives as strategies of resistance to food insecurity. Using community/civic engagement, she is working with others in the area to build alternative food ecosystems in southeast San Diego, where she lives and works. Diane is an alumni of UC San Diego, working to improve fresh food access as part of a broad-based movement to build social equity and healthy neighborhoods.

What: Talk by local food activist N. Diane Moss

When: June 4, 2019

Where: Dolores Huerta Room, Old Student Center

Sponsored by the International Institute Faculty Group "Food: Sustainability, Justice, and the Human Experience" and the Food & Society Interdisciplinary Research Group (IAH)